

The university buildings above the old town are a defining part of Zurichs skyline. From the majestic ETH main building dating back to the 1860s to the stylish new structures of the twenty-first century, the Zentrum Campus spans several architectural eras. Take a guided tour of its architecture to find out how building requirements have changed over time – from time-honoured lecture halls and rudimentary laboratories to collaborative, high-tech spaces for learning and experimenting. Their purpose has been the same throughout the decades: to facilitate research and teaching. Join us on a tour and discover the interplay between ideas and buildings.
